UNC's School of Law recently conducted a survey that measured board diversity in North Carolina corporations.

The law school took the top 50 largest North Carolina companies and noted the percentage of board members that were female and/or a minority. The survey showed that while diversity of corporate boards in North Carolina has increased over time, the state still falls short in comparison to Fortune 100 companies.

A survey taken in 1992 found that 4.3 percent of board members were women. Most recent findings show that that number has increased to 12.3%. Minority membership is also on the rise from 1.8% in 1992 to 7.1% as of 2009.

While these results are encouraging, North Carolina still lags behind the rest of the nation. A survey conducted by the Alliance for Board Diversity in 2006 found that 17.06% of Fortune 100 Board Members were female and 15.42% were minorities.
